Earthquake adds new twist to waterfront debate

Teri DeLoeche
Journal

ALBANY — Already strong interest in the proposed waterfront development is likely to be heightened after last week's earthquake destroyed San Francisco's Marina district. Like that district, the 149-acre area at the foot of Buchanan Street, is landfill which liquefies and becomes unstable during strong earthquakes. Santa Fe Pacific Realty Corp., which owns most of the land, wants to develop a multi-level commercial and residential complex on the site.

Albany Planning Director Claudia Cappio said a supplemental geotechnical study may be added to the recently-released draft environmental impact report in light of new information that may become available.

"If Santa Fe wants to continue to build on the (area most likely to be damaged in a strong tremor) we may ask for more in-

'It causes a significant wrinkle in the adequacy of the EIR. It doesn't invalidate it, but we hope to get more information'

—Elizabeth Baker, Waterfront Committee

formation," Cappio said. "It's very much in people's minds," she added.

Public debate opens Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Albany High School Little Theater. The earthquake may be fresh in participants' minds, but Cappio said traffic will be the topic of discussion.

The revised report examines the effects of Santa Fe's proposal.

Although six alternative development plans are considered, Santa Fe must pay development costs so all other alternatives are hypothetical including one which assumes continued operation of Golden Gate Fields race track at the site past the year 2002.

Cappio said extensive public comment regarding flaws in the first report prompted a revision of the 600-page document. Including the racetrack as an alternative and adding an analysis of ground and soil conditions are two key changes.

"A heavy dose of reality has been added," said Citizens for the Albany Shoreline President Tony Caine. However, he said, "I am concerned about the accuracy of their traffic assumptions. With the diversion of Caltrans resources to rebuild after the quake — it is doubtful the Interstate 880 widening will proceed on schedule."

New center's design topic workshop

Underground parking possible

Journal Staff Report

ALBANY — Talk of cars and parking to park them at the new community and community center initiated the workshop held Monday at the Community Center. Albany city officials stated progress made so far in planning the building at 1247 Main Ave. and agreed on some issues.

The group determined that the parking lot will be at the northern end of the site, but after weighing number of parking spaces required and possible negative impacts on the neighborhood, the group sent architect Hal Brandes and Associates back to the drawing board to produce schemes for the site layout. They requested one drawing with parking and one as it might look with spaces partially underground.

Although underground parking would produce more stalls and as a consequence more desirable open space.

Candidates' night draws unexpected crowd

Council hopefuls field questions on spending, development, safety

Thirteen Holt

EL CERRITO — Redevelopment, public safety and assessment districts were the hot topics at Wednesday's candidates' night, a forum for voters to meet and hear from the Nov. 7 City Council election.

Despite Tuesday's earthquake, the event drew more than 50 people.

Election

to the Community Center.

Thirteen Holt, Norma Jellison, and incumbent Richard Mank and W. Ritz answered questions from moderator Marge Collier.

Former El Cerrito mayor, Jellison, still angry about the 2-year-old Landscape Lighting Assessment District which assesses property owners a year, asked candidates if they felt it was "moral" and "fair" to approve it without a vote of the people.

Thirteen Holt, who has been on the Council four years, defended the action, saying only 3 percent of the population polled opposed it. "It was fair and it was to mount a recall campaign. The recall was eventually dropped, but some citizens remain bitter.

Winslow told the audience Wednesday: "I would never pass an assessment. I don't know why five people think they have the right to vote for 23,000 people. Yes they were elected, but these people elected them."

Kosel, Jellison and Ritz specifically advocated better communication between the council and the citizenry, presumably as a way of avoiding another divisive battle like that caused by the tax assessment.

"The citizens of El Cerrito must be consulted on the issues which impact them," Kosel said. "A public phone number is not enough. Council members must pick up the phone and make calls that will keep (citizens) informed on all aspects of pending council action."

W. Mae Ritz said she wants a citizens committee established to advise the council on issues of public interest.

Jellison also advocates an advisory committee. Asked if she would put the thorny issue of a tax assessment to vote, however, she said she would not.

"I believe that you cannot always put every issue before the voters. That's why you elect people to serve on your city government."

Residents at the forum were also concerned about redevelopment. El Cerrito's ambitious plan to revitalize its downtown and bring in badly-needed revenue also displaces long time businesses and some homes — an issue that every council for the last 12 years has had to wrestle with.

Mank said redevelopment is necessary to bring in tax dollars and that few people understand how it works.

"We have very few grants that we can go to to provide dollars of any substance," he said. "It's very important that we can get some good projects to generate sales tax."

Kosel said redevelopment must include compromise between existing homes and businesses and potential developers. She cited the inclusion of the popular Silver Dollar Restaurant into a proposed development as an example of successful blending.

Winslow supports the concept of redevelopment, but he opposes the city's wooing of big chain stores. "I hope the people of El Cerrito will write Target and tell them to stay the hell out of El Cerrito."

The candidates were unanimous in their approval of the city's public safety departments. Each suggested some fine tuning, but were generally supportive of the police and fire departments. Ritz said, however,

Other fault places hills in jeopardy

Experts say Hayward fault could cause more damage

By Chris Treadway
The Journal

Firms that do residential seismic strengthening say they are being flooded with calls from homeowners wanting to prevent the type of complete damage sustained by homes in Oakland and Santa Cruz.

Most of the houses collapsed after they were "walked" off their foundations by vibration from the 7.0 earthquake on the San Andreas Fault.

Seismologists say overall damage would be greater if a similar earthquake strikes the Hayward Fault, which runs beneath densely populated areas of the East Bay hills.

There is a 20 percent chance of a 7.0 earthquake on the Hayward Fault in the next 30 years, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

Even a 6.0 to 6.5 quake on the Hayward Fault would likely produce "destruction to similar to Santa Cruz," where at least 60 homes were destroyed or heavily damaged last week and major portions of commercial areas were leveled, said Greg Prinzse, president of Earthquake Safety, Inc., a Berkeley firm specializing in seismic strengthening.

Although major damage to freeways and large, older buildings from a tremor that size would be unavoidable here, Prinzse said, severe damage to houses is preventable if the structure is properly strengthened.

Older houses that simply rest, unattached, on their foundations are most susceptible to major damage.

Newer houses that have anchor bolts attaching the base boards of the exterior walls to the foundation are "better than no connection at all," Prinzse said.

But these connections can be inadequate in a large quake because nails are all that attach the studs of the exterior wall to the base board (called a mud sill).

Structural engineers recommend steel brackets bolted to the foundation and the studs of the exterior walls.

Another common cause of Little damage in East Bay water system

Despite 84 main breaks and major power shortages caused by the massive 7.0 earthquake Tuesday, the East Bay Municipal Utility District water and wastewater systems were operating at near normal by mid-morning Wednesday.

There was no contamination of the drinking water for 1.1 million East Bay residents at any time during the emergency, and only small pockets of customers were without water at any time. EBMUD officials emphasized that the district's water is safe to drink.

Inspection of EBMUD's five East Bay dams showed no damage and no water loss. There was no major damage to EBMUD facilities that pump, treat and store water in the two-county service area or the Sierra watershed. Fifteen maintenance crews plus other emergency personnel worked throughout Tuesday night to stop the main breaks and monitor the system.

A 60-inch main break in the El Sobrante area will require water conservation in the northwest Contra Costa County communities of Richmond, San Pablo, El Sobrante, Pinole, Hercules, Rodeo and Crockett. EBMUD crews are expected to complete repairs within a week.

A 36-inch main break near Laney College in downtown Oakland caused a loss of about 11 million gallons of water, but no customers were without service as a result.

Leaks continued to plague the district in the aftermath of the quake, and conservation will be necessary throughout the district while repairs are made. About 50 families in the San Ramon Valley were without water during the night, but service was restored Wednesday.

Loss of power at EBMUD's wastewater treatment plant interrupted operations from 5:04 p.m. to 11:45 p.m. Tuesday, and power failure at a pumping

Bowl-a-Thon for quake victims

EL CERRITO — Golden Gate Lanes is sponsoring a Bowl-a-Thon Saturday to raise funds for earthquake victims.

District Manager Fred Foerster said the bowling alley will donate all the money taken in between 1 and 5 p.m. to the American Red Cross.

Bowlers may pay cash for the $2 games or make checks out directly to the Red Cross, he said.

Golden Gate Lanes is located at 11490 San Pablo Ave.

The Great Leveler

TO MANY OF US in this blessed pocket of calm, last Tuesday's earthquake at first seemed like most. A little stronger, perhaps, but certainly not devastating.

The Journal, Berkeley Voice and Montclairian staffs were working at our Oakland production office, a tired structure of old bricks and mortar, when the rumbling started. Beams creaked and dust sprinkled. We ignored the instructions drilled into us since childhood and instead stared at each other open-mouthed.

When the place went dark we ran out into the courtyard where cats were darting in zigzags across the parking lot. Residents of nearby apartment buildings came out onto their balconies and let out nervous whoops.

No one panicked; we'd had quite a jolt but it was clear the immediate area had seen no damage. Someone turned on a car radio to the World Series where Al Michaels explained casually that San Francisco had just experienced an earthquake. The crowd roared.

Minutes later the lightheartedness stopped. Fragments of the horrible news had reached the airwaves. Part of the Bay Bridge had collapsed; a mile-long section of Oakland freeway had fallen onto the deck below creating a concrete tomb for rush-hour motorists; fires were raging out of control.

This was not just another earthquake.

THE GRAPHIC IMAGES on the TV screen seemed unreal when you were sitting in a secure home in Albany, Kensington or El Cerrito. The car that flew over the gap in the bridge and smashed against the vertical roadway on the other side looked like a matchbox toy; the flattened freeway, a ribbon of dominoes.

For some, it was only after Peter Jennings' or Dan Rather's news specials that the magnitude of what had happened hit home. The San Andreas Fault had cut a swath of destruction from Santa Cruz to San Francisco and our earthquake had been catapulted from a regional shake to a global event.

In this part of the East Bay, over and over, local officials shook their heads in disbelief and gratitude. It could have been much worse here.

Employees in El Cerrito City Hall were glad that their unstable city hall was torn down two years ago and replaced by portables, which withstood the shaking.

No million-dollar homes on Albany's landfill waterfront. Suspected gas leaks turned out to be false alarms. Hillside houses stayed on their foundations.

Most important, almost all our loved ones made it home safely Tuesday night.

By Shirleen Holt

IF ANY EL CERRITO RESIDENTS are unsure about new City Manager Gary Pokorny, his performance in the hours after the quake should change their minds.

Crises separate the men from the boys (witness how Mayor Art Agnos outshone Mayor Lionel Wilson in handling the quake's aftermath) and Pokorny proved he is capable of leadership.

Having been in the city only six months and being an "earthquake novice" at that, he took the helm and handled the potential crisis with calm assurance.

AND IF YOU NEED PROOF that we're all the same under the skin you need look no farther than Channel 7's mini-interview with Jose Canseco at a San Bruno gas station Tuesday night.

The slugger was pumping gas and talking about the quake, an edge of excitability creeping into his voice. Forget the World Series, you could tell he just wanted to get home, pop open a can of something cold with some friends and compare quake stories.

SOMETIMES THE MEDIA get a bad rap. Authorities tend to treat newpeople like annoying gnats and last week was no different.

A TV reporter doing a standup near the I-880 collapse was unceremoniously pushed out of the way by a policeman who ordered him to leave. When he asked why — and he was polite — the officer shouted at him.

That wasn't necessary; a simple request to move would have sufficed. Those reporters were professionals working around the clock to provide the public with information on the disaster. They deserved to be treated with as much respect as other emergency service workers.

EL CERRITO'S SISTER CITY, Chelsea, Australia, was worried about us. Chief Administrative Officer Max Butler called city hall Thursday to inquire about the city's welfare.

"We were happy to tell him that we survived unscathed," said Linda Giddings, secretary to the city manager.

Winslow a wolf in sheep's clothing?

Editor:

The Chamber of Commerce's candidates night of Oct. 18 was most successful. Among the candidates only Mr. Winslow was not forthcoming.

He proposed staff cuts and salary cuts as solutions to city problems. He looked to the private sector for most needed services.

He took no stand on issues of discrimination against ethnic minorities. He was silent on services for the aging, handicapped, poor and homeless.

Mr. Winslow needs to answer these questions. Otherwise voters must assume that he continues to be "a wolf in sheep's clothing."

El Cerrito promises a fun, safe Halloween

By Eileen Duffy

City of El Cerrito

The city is holding a Halloween haunted house and carnival at the community center Oct. 30 and Oct. 31. There will be carnival booths, games and a special tiny tot room for children aged 2 to 5 years old. All children will win candy and prizes throughout the evening.

Kids can bring their parents and dare them to go with them in the haunted house. The haunted house will be offered both Monday and Tuesday nights. The lights-on tours will run from 3 to 5 p.m. for children aged 1 to 5 years old.

The cost is 50 cents per person. Lights-off tours begin at 6 p.m. and end at 9 p.m. The cost is $1.50 per person.

Carnival games will be available Oct. 31 from 5 to 9 p.m. The cost for five tickets is $1.

For information call the center at 525-6748.

Keep Halloween Safe

When going to and from the carnival in El Cerrito or the homes of friends or while trick-or-treating, remember these tips from Police Chief Daniel G. Givens and Fire Chief Pete Barraza:

• The safest way to go trick-or-treating is with an adult and in a neighborhood that you know. If your parents cannot be with you, stay with friends. It is safer to accept treats only from your neighbors or other acquaintances.

• If someone gives you candy that is not wrapped or sealed by the candy company, it should not be eaten. Throw it away. If any one of the treats receives is suspicious, call the police in your community. In El Cerrito call 237-3233.

• Parents and children should carry flashlights and keep them turned on for safety and visibility. This is especially important when you are on streets at dusk and after dark.

• Costumes should be light-colored, preferably with reflective tape attached. Be sure the label indicates that the material is flame retardant. Masks that block your vision; a natural makeup facial paint, theatrical make-up or cosmetics applied directly to the skin is the safest.

• Decorations are also a potential hazard. Be aware that dry cornstalks and other harvest items can easily catch on fire. Use caution around them. Use battery-powered lights, never candle light jack-o-lanterns and other decorations.

Everyone wants to enjoy the events of the evening. These tips will help make that possible. Police and fire officials will also be on alert for any activity that would endanger the citizens of the community.

Parents need to be watchful. If anyone observed that might endanger yours or your children, call the emergency services department at 911.

Following this advice and participating in events scheduled by the City of El Cerrito will ensure that citizens of all ages in the community have a safe and enjoyable Halloween.

High school reporter takes freeway tour with governor

By Shahla Ahmadyar

Special to The Journal

Ahmadyar is a journalism student at Skyline High School in Oakland.

When Gov. George Deukmejian got a call from Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy telling him of the earthquake, he did not realize the severity of tragedy.

When he saw the international television station CNN which was taking feed from other stations it brought home the reality of the situation McCarthy had explained.

Deukmejian came back to California. He called a press conference at the Alameda Naval Air Station Thursday following his arrival and then went on a tour to survey the damage of the Cypress structure on Interstate 880.

Two of us among the press corps were the only student reporters allowed on the base and tour.

But as the day unfolded, we would be two of only three journalists allowed to survey the damage with the governor.

The other members of the press corps were left behind when they lost track of the convoy.

We were left with government officials and a reporter from the San Francisco Examiner.

We went up the ramp that was blocked off to public use. I was terrified as we drove along the very freeway that connected to the Cypress structure — afraid there may have been more cracks that we could fall through.

But I followed, angry as I thought of the many innocent people who were still stuck in between the structure.

We took the first exit ramp off the freeway and drove along the wounded Cypress Structure. It was still and quiet.

We parked our cars along the debris that had fallen from the freeway.

The governor and his staff got out of the car and walked alongside the structure. They stared, bewildered.

As we were being directed by Caltrans officials and the Oakland Police Department, I noticed some rescue workers in a small square box that was extended by a mechanical ladder to a section of the Cypress structure, where there was a small opening to make a rescue attempt.

"People in your vehicles, hang on. Efforts to rescue you are being made," I heard them say over a loudspeaker.

There was no response.

There was a distinct odor lingering in the air. I came to the realization that this odor, an unfamiliar one, was in fact death.

This made me wonder just what kind of chance there was that anybody would be still alive. And the dreadful reality of it all is that each day the top structure is laying down on the bottom half, the chance of any hope of life decreases.

'People in your vehicles, hang on. Efforts to rescue you are being made' I heard them say

The sight was incredible. For the past years I've been led to believe freeways are concrete and therefore very stable. But never in my wildest dreams would I even think that a section of a freeway could just crumble down like a blocks.

The rebars that the cement was molded into were bent downward like a hundred wild weeds. It's amazing to think even the square cement columns that are responsible for holding up the entire structure split in two.

And only half of it was holding a specific section up.

Rails that are supposed to keep one from falling off the road, just fell out of socket like a warped slot car racer set.

Kevin M. Brett, Deukmejian's press secretary, told us we were welcome to take as many pictures as we wanted just as long as we did not interrupt the governor's concentration on the issue by asking questions.

I didn't ask any questions, but it was a unique experience spending my first time at the Cypress structure with Deukmejian, who also witnessing the destruction for the first time.

The earthquake's destruction of Interstate 880's Cypress portion awed observers who were stunned to see the thick concrete columns snapped like twigs.

Grief counselors offer advice

Expect to be affected by quake in ways not anticipated

Bay City News

Bay Area residents who experienced the earthquake may not realize how much sympathetic stress and grief they feel for the strangers who died, according to an expert in grief counseling.

"I can't imagine that any of us who went through this aren't feeling a great deal of sympathy," said Carol Lillibridge, a grief counselor.

But "people may not be aware how much they are sympathetic, they may not realize how much the level of their own stress is the level of devastation around," she said.

The traumatic suddenness of the disaster, the vividness of television pictures and the geographic closeness make it almost impossible for Bay Area residents not to grieve for the victims of the pancaked freeway, capsized buildings and fire, Lillibridge said.

But there are a couple of reasons people may not recognize the degree of their sympathetic stress.

First, there is a natural tendency to bottle up grief because it is so painful to bring it to the surface. Second, people tend to mix up the stress from their individual experiences in the quake — such as being scared or shaken or having their households damaged — with their sorrow over the greater tragedies around them and not realize they are affected by both.

Some people may also try to minimize their emotions about their own experiences because they seem trivial compared with the fatalities, she said.

Lillibridge said it is important for survivors to recognize the "double prongs" of earthquake

Environmental report outlines several development options

The following are draft environmental impact report project alternatives in order of intensity. All face the same problems but to differing degrees.

The site's goals, adopted in 1985, remain constant. The city wants a mix of self-supporting recreational, community and commercial uses. Recreation and public access to the waterfront have priority. Housing is included in three of the six proposals. All except the racetrack alternative assume demolition of the racetrack after the lease expires in 2002.

• NO PROJECT: The city is required by law to consider the effect of no development. In this case, the landfill must be closed regardless of development plans. Worker safety and the danger of explosions or fires are the prime areas of concern during the closure process.

• EASTSHORE PARK: This development plan is based on the recommendations of the Citizens for an Eastshore State Park. The group wants to see land development limited to one 300-room hotel and office and commercial buildings. Approximately 800 people would be employed at the site and there would be no housing. This plan, while having the fewest negative effects, would nonetheless create pressure on Albany's housing market, according to the EIR. It also would be incompatible with race track operations, worsen highway traffic and air pollution and block Gateway condominium residents' bay views. Like all development alternatives, earthquake safety is an issue.

• CENTRAL PARK: This plan calls for 63 percent of open space and parkland. Three thousand people would be employed at the site that would include a restaurant, a 150-room hotel, a community center, offices and commercial buildings at the site.

In addition to creating the same problems as the Eastshore Park plan, water quality would be affected and an increased demand on the fire department would be felt. The development would be unattractive when viewed from some angles.

• RACETRACK ALTERNATIVE: This is a response to public pressure to include the possibility of continued racetrack operation past the year 2002. The plan is what Santa Fe is proposing for the first stage of its development. A 500-room hotel, 180 housing units and commercial and office development would be built on existing landfill site. Nearly 6,000 people would be employed at the site. All previously mentioned impacts would be heightened and demands on public schools and police services increased. The view of the Golden Gate Bridge from Solano Avenue buildings would be partially obstructed.

• VILLAGE HUB LOW:

Another Waterfront Committee proposal but with more development including two 200-room hotels, 670 housing units, commercial and office buildings and a community center. More than 8,000 people would be employed at the site. In addition to problems previously mentioned, traffic at local intersections would increase and bay views from Solano Avenue would be blocked.

• SANTA FE: The company wants to build three hotels with a total of 1,000 rooms, 980 housing units, and commercial and office space. Santa Fe calls its proposal "Albany on the Bay: A Place to Live Work and Play." The present plan calls for heavy development, especially in the first stages, on the most seismically unstable part of the land. Some 10,000 people would be employed at the site. All problems would increase, especially traffic and air pollution. The site could no longer be viewed from Buchanan Street. This is the plan Santa Fe submitted to the city.

• VILLAGE HUB HIGH: The Waterfront Committee's look at development potential beyond Santa Fe's plans. Two 600-room hotels, 1,206 housing units, commercial and office buildings, a 30,000 square-foot community center and 13,500 employees would all be housed at the site.

for the council-appointed Waterfront Committee said she too wants to see information upgraded in light of the earthquake.

"Additional kinds of information may become available concerning building on landfill," Baker said. "This causes a significant wrinkle in the adequacy of the EIR. It doesn't invalidate it, but we hope to get more information."

Cappio agreed earthquake data may be important to future development at the site but said the earthquake does not change the report's validity.

"That area's no more likely to be dangerous than any other area on the shoreline already developed. They believe you can build and meet earthquake standards, but regardless of what they do, there's going to be hazards."

All of the development alternatives under consideration propose "intense development" in landfill areas, some more than others. (See accompanying box.) "Potential seismic hazards at the site include ground shaking, seismically-induced ground failures of various types and flooding caused by tsunamis," the report states.

In addition to the potential for earthquake damage at the development, air and water quality will be worsened, traffic congestion and demands on local schools and police and fire services will increase and some bay views will be blocked. Steps can be taken to lessen these effects, but they cannot be abolished, according to the report.

cording to the report.

Santa Fe first submitted a development application to Albany in 1985. The plan has since generated heated controversy.

Adding to the debate are city plans to turn part of the construction-debris landfill into a state shoreline park. Any future development of the property must first win approval from a multitude of government agencies.

A second public hearing is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 6 at 7:30 p.m. at the same location in lieu of the regular City Council meeting at City Hall.

Both hearings will be videotaped and shown on cable television Channel 3 in hour-long segments beginning the week of Nov. 6.

extensive damage is the side-to-side swaying of a house during a quake. That can be prevented by laterally bracing exterior walls with heavy plywood attached in the crawl space area beneath a house.

The notion of "earthquake proofing" a house is incorrect, Prinzse said.

"There is no way anybody can guarantee there will be no damage," Prinzse said. "But if a house is properly strengthened, it will be confined to non-structural damage," such as broken chimneys or windows.

Besides providing a measure of security, reinforcement can improve the resale value of a home as more Realtors and home inspection agencies are realizing the necessity of seismic strengthening, he said.

Wood-frame houses, which make up the majority of houses in the hills, are the simplest to secure, he said.

Masonry and brick buildings are more complex to reinforce properly.

Hillside houses built on the downside of steep slopes and using long exposed beams of wood for support present the biggest challenge, he said.

"There are limits to what can be done because there is so little to work with," Prinzse said.

At greatest risk, he said, are "houses built on a steep slope with a garage at the top at street level."

The "tremendous mass" of two to four cars parked at the top would be too great in a large earthquake even if the house is bolted and reinforced, Prinzse said.

The cost of having reinforcement done by a firm that specializes in the process can range from about $1,000 to $10,000, he said, depending on the size and complexity of a house.

Adept homeowners with budget constraints can reinforce their house themselves. A booklet from the Bay Area Regional Earthquake Preparedness Project (540-2713) has instructions for installing anchor bolts and lateral bracing.

But Prinzse cautions that work improperly or insufficiently done can result in more damage than if the house had been left alone.

At the very least, he said, a house should have a professional seismic inspection.

Reinforcing a house that has dry rot or an unsound foundation would be "money down the drain," Prinzse said.

Homeowners wanting the work professionally done should choose a firm that specializes in seismic work and should beware of fly-by-night contractors that offer to reinforce a house at a bargain price, he said.

He advises homeowners to ask for references and consult with professional associations, architects and the Better Business Bureau before selecting a firm.

El Cerrito Chamber

By Del Wisenor

Malailua collecting donations for quake victims

El Cerrito was fortunate in not being seriously affected by the recent tragic earthquake. Only reports of minor damage of household items have been heard and we extend our deepest sympathies to all the earthquake victims and families in the loss of their loved ones. People are pulling together, helping one another and we support the efforts of Pat Malailua, chamber vice president and manager of the Plaza branch of the Mechanics Bank, who is aiding these victims by collecting canned goods, baby food and disposable diapers for the Salvation Army.

The banks are collection sites and we will be happy to receive things in our office and will deliver, as well, to the proper agencies. Baseball and football aside, these people need our help and now.

We've also had a number of calls about blood donations and have been informed that interested donors should wait until next week as the need will continue but there is enough at present. Call the blood bank at 654-2924 for more information. Also, the number for the Salvation Army at 4600 Appian Way, El Sobrante, is 262-0500.

The membership drive is off and running with welcome to new members, Lloyd D. Jung, realtor; Black, Brown and Lanier, attorneys; Bill Pezick, EA, tax preparation and financial planning; and to new associate members City Manager Gary Pokorny and Bob Winslow.

Call Rena Bruton at 235-2980 or Bill Kerber at 235-5581 for membership information.

The Oct. 18 candidates night was well attended with about 70 in the audience along with candidates Dick Mank, incumbent, Mae Ritz, appointed incumbent, and Norma Jellison, Dathie Kosel and Bob Winslow. All gave seven-minute statements and then fielded questions taken by moderator Marge Collins.

Co-sponsoring this event long offered by the chamber were the League of Women Voters and The Women's Club of El Cerrito. We appreciate those who attended in supporting the efforts of the chamber to allow the citizens the opportunity of hearing and meeting with the candidates.

The Nov. 1 membership mixer will be held 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the El Cerrito Royale, El Cerrito's new retirement hotel located at 6510 Gladys. RSVP is not required but is helpful in the planning. Call 527-5333.

Toxic task force seeks hazards violators

Contra Costa County's new Environmental Crimes Strike Force, known as a toxics strike force in other counties, will combine the manpower and expertise of the Environmental Health Division, District Attorney's office, sanitation districts, fire services and law enforcement to detect and prosecute businesses, industries and individuals violating the hazardous materials laws.

"In the past five years the number of violations has increased significantly," said Dr. William B. Walker, director of Environmental Health. "Because the cost of complying with environmental laws has increased, including disposal fees, many people feel it is cheaper and easier to violate the law."

It is known that violators most commonly dispose of hazardous waste in sewers; transport hazardous waste unsafely to disposal facilities not permitted to receive it; store these materials unsafely; dump drums of materials in some out of the way spot, termed "midnight dumping" or continue to use leaking underground tanks.

John Pederson, inspector for the Environmental Protection Unit of Santa Clara County, feels their strike force has been very effective, stating, "We act as the court of last resort for the compliance community. It has a chilling effect when we prosecute."

His unit has prosecuted large and small companies and businesses. At least one violator was arrested, jailed and fined $1 million personally.

Temblor shakes up Albany athlete

By Don August
The Journal

LAST TUESDAY, which will forever be remembered as the day of the quake, I was supposed to be in San Francisco by 6 p.m. I got a little bored here in Albany so I decided to head over across the bay early. On my way to the BART station I passed Albany High School and remembered the volleyball match. Since I was early, I stopped to watch.

It was a thriller, with Holy Names taking on Albany. The match was even at one game apiece and in the third and deciding game Holy Names led by a point at 9-8 when the earth started to shake.

Now I know it's a common occurrence for the bleachers to shake at sporting events, but I knew something was wrong when I realized I was sitting on cement seats. All at once everyone in the gym had their attention brought to the ceiling of the gym as the lights first swayed, then flickered, and finally fell to the court below.

Once the shaking stopped, everyone ran outside. Calm was restored and the game was postponed, still a tie. As of now plans to continue have not been made.

UNFORTUNATELY, the junior varsity team which was just getting ready to play was forced to postpone the match. The team however took its turn at drama later in the week when it battled Salesian and in a best of five game match pulled out a dramatic victory.

After taking the first game 15-7, the Cougars fell behind when Salesian rallied to take Game Two 4-15 as well as Game Three 6-15. With their backs against the wall, Albany took the final two games by scores of 15-9 and 15-13 for the victory.

Albany's girls' tennis team also beat the quake by getting in their match against Bishop O'Dowd. However, they lost 5-2. Albany's only two wins came from their two top-seeded players. First top seed Tanya Lauer won her match by a score of 8-1 and following that number two Tracy Nguyen shut out her opponent 8-0.

The loss left Albany's team with a 2 and 4 record with just one more opponent left as they travel to Encinal.

OVER ON THE El Cerrito side, a few sports were able to keep their planned events despite the quake. The varsity volleyball team rumbled around in the quake then went back to the gym and completed their match against Clayton Valley by scores of 15-8, 8-15, 15-13, 14-16.

Despite the loss the Cougars remain in third place with a four-team round robin tournament approaching quickly. This week the Cougars played No. 1 Carondelet and No. 4 Pittsburg. Today they take on Antioch which stands just a game behind El Cerrito and Pittsburg.

On to the football field, the Gauchos varsity squad trounced Ygnacio Valley 34-0 behind another impressive offensive performance. With results around the league the Gauchos are in great shape in the standings, heading into final home game tomorrow 7:30 p.m.

Albany was not so fortunate. They traveled to Oakland and they were forced to take an undefeated Bishop O'Dowd to the rain. Final damage: Bishop O'Dowd 40, Albany 0.

The Cougars host St. Mary tomorrow for a 3:30 p.m. homecoming game.

Business Scene

By Michael S. Holmes

In the spirit of the 1989 fall season MONTCLAIR PRODUCE is presenting its First Annual Fall Fest, Saturday, October 28, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. We are all invited to join in the celebration of the Fall Harvest Festival.

The festival will feature a free apple juice and apple cider tasting provided by TinMam of Boonville during the event. You will be able to sample six varieties of juices and ciders. The perfect answer for your tailgate picnics, ski trips and holiday entertaining.

Also featured will be fall harvest pumpkins, Indian corn, ornamental gourds, many varieties of squashes, mini pumpkins and New Crop apples for your Thanksgiving center pieces and displays.

Montclair Produce is sponsoring a pumpkin carving contest for ages 6 and under and 7 to 12. All carved pumpkins must be received by 11 a.m. on Saturday, October 28. Please include an entry form with your pumpkin; forms may be acquired at Montclair Produce prior to the contest.

The pumpkins will be judged on creativity and originality. Grand Prize for each group will be a gigantic BIG MAC pumpkin. These are the 50 to 75 pound variety that win "produce grow offs" regularly. The winners will be announced at 11:30 a.m. on October 28.

Montclair Produce is located in the newly renovated Village Square and has a wide selection of farm-fresh, organically grown, pesticide-free produce arriving daily.

Steve Muranishi and Carl Kurahara of Montclair Produce wish to thank the local community for their loyal support and patronage during the start of their new business and they pledge to continue supplying the freshest tree-ripened fruits and vegetables to our city.

Montclair Produce is located at 2220 Mountain Blvd. in the Village Square. They are open Monday through Friday 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The phone number for additional information about the contest or the produce is 530-

Saturday, October 28, is the public opening ceremony of the new AFRICAN ELEPHANT EXHIBIT at the Oakland Zoo. Smokey and Lisa will have a new two acre home complete with watering hole and a 3000-square-foot night house.

The home with a 23-foot ceiling home also have a swimming pool, a mud wallow, a sand pit and Kopje African rock formations to make the occupants feel right at home.

The Oakland Zoo also has plans to adopt several orphaned baby elephants from Africa and bring them to the new facility.

There will be much more to report on this exciting new exhibit at the zoo but for now let's all show up on Saturday, October 28 to welcome Smokey and Lisa to their new home. The Oakland Zoo is located off Highway 580 at the Golf Links Road exit. The zoo will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the opening ceremony will take place at 1 p.m.

stress and try to work through both.

For many people, talking about their feelings to friends and counselors, again and again if necessary, is a basic element of working through grief.

"In the grief process, we find people need to tell their story over and over. Repeating the story to someone makes it sink in and settle and then allow the person to move on to somewhere else," Lillibridge said.

"There is something healing in sharing your feeling and realizing that someone cared to hear it."

If talking to friends doesn't seem to be adequate, Lillibridge suggests seeking help from the numerous counseling organizations that are offering their services in the aftermath of the earthquake.

Another suggestion is to help other people and yourself as well by listening to their stories.

"What we can do for one another is listening and reaching out," Lillibridge said. "That helps us take something by being strong for a moment — for a moment you can be in control."

Single people who have no family members nearby may want to arrange ways to "extend out" to friends, such as arranging an informal get-together, to avoid feeling isolated.

Children also need to express their feelings. If they have difficulty talking about them, they may benefit from being given other ways of expressing their reactions, such as drawing or modeling clay figures.

At the same time, Lillibridge observes, children need at some point to return to a routine, such as going back to school, and feel reassured that "life does go on."

"I can't believe it, I'm thin."

SABINA INDIA CUISINE

The beautiful 1920 tile front building that now houses the Sabina India Cuisine restaurant is a fitting entrance to a world of spices and mas from the country that has widened our taste with Tandoori specialties, saffron rice dishes, lamb and seafood curries and vegetarian dishes all from Northern India.

Sabina India Cuisine has been gaining popularity under the able management of Mrs. Urmila Desai and chef Ashok Kumar who offer the unique experience of traditional Indian dining.

Dishes on the menu include: Tandoori prawns in a marinade of yogurt; boneless chicken tikka kabab marinated in spices and roasted; pasanda curry in a mildly spiced cream sauce with nuts; and a hot spicy chicken vindaloo served with potatoes. All dishes are served with rice and traditional bread called nan.

Sabina India Cuisine is open for lunch Monday through Friday 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and for dinner seven days a week from 5:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., Sunday evening until 9 p.m. There are two locations: in Concord at 1628 Webster St. (the phone number is 268-0863) and in Concord at 4607 Clayton Rd. (the phone number is 827-9112).

SEAN FRESH

Sean Fresh in Albany is a continental restaurant specializing in seafood prepared in a variety of imaginative ways. From their lunch menu diners may select broiled Australian lobster tail, seafood pasta, sauteed scallops and sole Oscar, fresh fillet of sole with crab meat, asparagus spears and hollandaise sauce.

There is also a daily fresh fish menu with selections ranging from trout and California rock cod to chef specials of crab-stuffed rainbow trout and Mississippi farm-raised catfish.

All entrees are served with soup or salad, baked potato or rice pilaf and fresh vegetables.

Sean Fresh serves dinner Sunday through Thursday from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 4 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., closed Sundays. The restaurant is located at 523 San Pablo Ave. in Albany. Phone 525-6219.

FAT LADY BAR AND RESTAURANT

The Fat Lady Bar and Restaurant, near Jack London Square in Oakland, has been the premier business person's lunch spot for over 20 years. Enhancing this reputation is the addition of serving breakfast on Saturdays.

Election

that she wants to see the police department expanded and the city hire "professional, trained people that would enhance the image of El Cerrito."

(The Police Department was blemished earlier this year when a rookie cop was convicted of beating a homeless man and forcing him to walk into the bay. He and another officer resigned as a result of the incident; the Police Department has remained tight-lipped about it.)

Candidates came to the forum with their own agendas in mind as well:

Cathie Kosel, a planning commissioner, said the city should be creative in seeking money to fund city services including seeking grants, establishing users fees, exploring facility sharing with neighboring cities and imposing short-term assessment districts. Kosel said she supports senior citizen, child care and youth programs.

Jellison, also a planning commissioner, said she wants to see a City Council that is more responsive to the "changing complexion of the city." She said she wants to maintain and expand city services such as street maintenance and fire, child care and programs.

Winslow, a retired police officer who ran unsuccessfully in 1987, repeatedly called for restraint and said he would have voted for pay raises for personnel and council members. Winslow won applause when he said he supports reform but that the city "can't waste money."

W. Mae Ritz, a citizen participation in the process, in the redevelopment of child care, on traffic circles.

Ritz, who was appointed ago to fill Anna Howe's seat, supports the city's child care programs.

Richard Mank tickled of accomplishments during four-year tenure on the council, including a low-cost bicycle path and work on the old Southern Pacific of way, the El Cerrito shopping complex, two senior care centers, and the El Royale, a senior housing project.

Mank said he supports additional programs for senior care and youth groups.

Center

space it can also add as much as $1 million to the cost of the project, according to City Administrator Steve Salomon.

The joint meeting of the Albany Library/Community Center Design Advisory Committee and the City Council, Planning and Zoning Commission and the Park and Recreation Commission and the Arts Committee roughed out the next steps in the design process. Other issues agreed on were:

- Access to parking will be from Masonic Avenue to lessen traffic on Marin and Evelyn avenues.

- The library will be on the west side of the site buffering Evelyn Avenue houses from Community Center activities.

- The main entrance, called the ceremonial entrance, will be on Marin Avenue with a smaller entrance from the parking lot.

- The multi-use room will face Masonic Avenue.

- Availability of sunlight, prevailing wind direction and noise will determine the location of open space.

- Preservation of the present building or portions of it will be determined as future design phases unfold.

Mayor Henry Kruse called the meeting to hear public input on the plans for the new building, formerly the site of the old Albany Hospital, purchased by the city in March for $1.1 million.

Notice of the meeting was sent to a list of Albany citizens who had previously expressed interest in the plans as well as members of the Friends of the Albany Library and all property owners and residents within 300 feet of the building.

A feasibility study based on the recommendations of a council-appointed advisory committee and prepared by Marquis and Associates was accepted by the council in August.

The architects presented three possible options: refurbish the old building; combine rehabilitation of the old building with new construction; or build an entirely new structure.

Finding that costs to make the old building habitable and starting from scratch were comparable, the advisory committee recommended that plans go ahead for a new building. The council agreed with the proviso that portions of the old building would remain if found usable in the future.

Because of uncertain funding the project will be completed over an unspecified time as money becomes available. First to be built will be a Community Center with kitchen using Albany's portion of bond money, $455,000, from the East Bay Regional Park District Measure AA passed by voters last year.

Also available for use is the $160,000 legacy to the library of Albany resident Edith Stone and future grants from Proposition 85, the recently-passed state library bond issue.

The joint meeting was postponed from Oct. 18 and replaced the regular Monday night council meeting, originally cancelled because of a League of California Cities conference in San Francisco. The conference was cancelled because of the earthquake.

Sporty Pontiac model runs like the wind

Has power plus good looks

Two years ago, most GM sedans and coupes were rear-wheel drive, didn't handle particularly well, and had about as much character as a pile of cucumbers. Today, perception has changed dramatically.

The quality and nature of European and Japanese automobiles have influenced the American buyer to the point where he expects his new car to be interesting, safe and enjoyable to drive.

The past five years have produced a vast change in the "typical" American automobile. Pontiac has not been slow to take the challenge and its line now includes a wide range of completely new products which offer fine selection for the buyer without too much compromise.

The quality is up, as is the content. This has come about because engineering perception has changed dramatically to keep pace with the marketplace's more discerning and sophisticated buyer.

I recently spent a day at the Memphis Motorsport Park driving the new Pontiac line. One model stands out like the proverbial "hump on a camel's back"—the Turbo Grand Prix.

Based on the regular front drive Grand Prix, the Turbo version offers a delightful and good-looking package which sets it apart from the crowd. It looks set to run like the wind with special swept-out fender flares and air flaps, lowered suspension and cross-laced alloy wheels over light red bodywork.

Pontiac called on ASC-McLaren to develop the special line which takes a heavily-tuned Grand Prix coupe and adds a mass of special ASC-McLaren pieces to boost its power, performance and looks.

The stylish bodywork, with its flat greenhouse, is lowered about three inches using the factory Y99 Rally-tuned suspension package and sizable P245-50 ZR

Auto Scene

David Fetherston

16 Goodyear Eagle "Gatorback" steel radial tires. This package produces a very adhesive combination without much of the normal ride harshness associated with such suspension upgrades.

On the track in Memphis, I found the Turbo Grand Prix an exciting ride. It would pull hard all the way to the top end of the long main straight and then, with a gentle squeeze of the brake, I could slice the mph off quickly and redirect the nose into an eight mile sweeping right-handed turn without any misgivings about direction or balance.

The track also has a series of chicanes which offer a combination of country road-like turns that let you enter slow and leave hard. Through these twists I found the Turbo pointed well, had a more than adequate turn in and left the chicane as easily and hard as it entered it.

ABS equipped

After 10 or 12 circuits around the track, I found myself thoroughly enjoying the coupe. Its four-wheel disc brake package is ABS equipped and performed with fade-free repetition even under some punishing driving.

Anti-lock braking systems are now a must for any new automobile. They offer the driver the best active, all-round safety improvement since side impact door beams became mandatory. Forget the sun roof and the leather, give me ABS brakes anytime.

Powering the coupe is a special

Pontiac's 1990 Turbo Grand Prix looks like a sure and safe winner.

ASC-McLaren V6. The company has specially prepared this modified engine package with all the neatness of a European manufacturer. It uses a single T25 Garrett water-cooled turbo which passes air through a compact inter-cooler.

The engine runs a conservative 8.75-to-1 compression with special Mahle designed alloy pistons. This punches the horsepower of the 3100 cc engine up from 135 to a substantial 205 horsepower.

Torque is also increased sizably to 220 foot pounds. Fuel is supplied by a multi-point fuel injection system and the exhaust uses a dual pipe system which is tipped with a pair of fancy box exhaust tips styled into the rear valance panel.

The hood is also special with a pair of ribbed vents to help dissipate the extra heat which the turbo produces. This combination produces a 16-to-1 power to weight ratio, up from the 24-to-1 which the standard version offers. In everyday terms this means that the Turbo Grand Prix is a punchy little package.

Taste of the future

Surprisingly, the Turbo coupe only comes with a four-speed automatic transaxle. Even more surprising is how well it does its job and how little I missed having a five-speed shifter to enjoy the V6's hearty performance.

Inside, the Turbo coupe nearly has it all. The dash has full analog instrumentation which is clearly displayed in a rounded capsule dash. A HUD or Heads Ups Display, is also standard.

This unit projects a digital display of your speed into the lower left hand corner of your vision path through the windshield. These single item projected image systems are a taste of the future when we may well see all dashboard information transferred to see-through HUD images projected in the windshield.

The Turbo coupe is a very complete option package. Not only does it have a powerful power train and hyper-suspension package, its option list is complete down to nearly every convenience and comfort option.

These creature comforts include air conditioning, articulated six-way power adjustable seats, rear bucket seats with headrests and a special "ski package pass through" in the rear armrest, leather bound steering wheel and a high-energy six-speaker sound system with graphic equalizer matched to remote steering wheel controls. The only items not included are sunroof, leather seats and CD player.

The Grand Prix is a very pleasant ride. I liked its comfort as much as I liked its on-road handling and get up and go.

Car fluids require routine check

If you have never checked your automatic transmission fluid, you're like many car owners. That's the one underhood check many people avoid.

The reason, according to Car Care Council, is that people tend to be intimidated by the procedure. "More to the point," says Council President Donald B. Midgley, "they don't know how to go about it or what to do if the fluid does need attention."

"This should be part of routine maintenance like checking the oil, or the coolant level," he emphasizes.

Transmission fluid should be checked monthly. Get in the habit now, suggests Midgley.

To check your car's transmission fluid have the engine at the normal operating temperature necessary, so that the fluid is expanded to its normal level.

Park the car on a level surface with the engine idling and the parking brake set. Move the shift lever through the gears returning to park or neutral.

Remove the dipstick and, with a clean cloth or paper towel, wipe it dry. Reinsert it, pull it out and note the level and color of the fluid. It should be light red.

Dark red or brown coloration, or if it smells burned, indicates the transmission may have been overheated; consult with a transmission expert. You may want him to check for damaged parts — he'll probably recommend replacing the fluid and filter.

Normal operating temperature for a transmission is 180 degrees Fahrenheit. When it exceeds that temperature, oxidation begins. At 300 degrees the fluid quickly loses its protective qualities and can damage the transmission.

If you're pulling a trailer or otherwise giving your vehicle severe service (check your owners manual for detailed definition) install an auxiliary cooler.

If the color of your transmission fluid is normal red but the level is low, add fluid.

Extra care urged after time change

With the return to Standard Time on Oct. 29, motorists need to use extra caution when driving during the weeks immediately following the time change, according to the California State Automobile Association.

CSAA officials suggest that the one-hour time change may contribute to additional driving hazards.

The CSAA urges drivers to follow these suggestions.

• In the early morning darkness, watch out for children going to school.

• On your way to work, wear sunglasses and adjust sun visors properly to combat the glare caused by the sun's morning reflection on the windshield and other metallic car parts.

• When there is sun glare, it's a good idea to reduce speed. Drivers may not be able to see the brake lights of a car that is slowing down.

• Remember that sun glare may become even more of a problem if windshields are dirty or scratched.

• During morning and evening commute hours, reduce speed if there is reduced visibility caused by fog or drizzle.

• It may be dark when you drive home after work, so be aware of joggers and other pedestrians.

Standard Time will remain in effect until the first Sunday in April 1990, when Daylight-Saving Time will return.

Red Ribbon Week in Albany

Albany schools are honoring the California State Department of Education and Californians for Drug-Free Youth's Red Ribbon Week this week. Each Albany student was given a red ribbon lettered in gold print reading, "The Choice for Me - Drug Free." Students will wear the lapel ribbon all week both at school and after school hours demonstrating their support for a drug-free future.

This week principals of Albany schools are responsible for each classroom having a drug awareness project. Some classroom project suggestions were to conduct a Red Ribbon pledge campaign where students sign a pledge to be drug-free and forward the pledge to parents and teachers.

Others are to discuss what is an illegal use of a legal drug, the school district's drug policy and student code of conduct and perhaps have a drug-free message contest. Teachers are conducting individual projects for different classrooms.

Kindergarten through the third grades are discussing healthy lifestyles, peer pressure and how to make healthy choices, drawing drug-free posters and pictures and having students write alcohol and other drug prevention slogans.

Students, parents, merchants and residents are asked to "fly red" this week. Ribbons can be attached to doors, windows, poles, fences, trees, bushes, etc. antennae and on the pet.

The Albany Chamber of Commerce and the Albany League have window displays on Ribbon Week.
